

DECRETUM PONTIFICIS
MAXIMI AUSTENASLÆ

DYMPHINUS

EX CAMPUS IONATHANUS
Prid. Eid. October Anno Domini
MMXXII

DECRETUM SECUNDUS

God be praised, we come into the nineteenth year of a succession of scholars and sages. While the first of our series were heathens and after the sentry of Alexander II our series fell back unto heathenry until the liberation during the sentry of Ezekiel I, we have endured.

From this succession I call back to Alexander I. His depiction is regal, crowned and in his hand a scepter. He sits upon a throne.

There must be respect and honor for our series, and responsibility for our posterity. Therefore, there shall be a seat in the capital, a place for us in our Rome. Whether by charity or at my own or my successors' cost, it shall be reserved. On the eve of the new Pope, it shall be turned on its side and turned back upright.

